MASON AT MANHATTAN

Supreme Court Justice Makes Elks

Memorial Address.

In an address delivered at Manhattan yesterday, as a part of the Elk memorial exercises in that city, Justice Henry F. Mason took as his text the variant sentiments regarding the question of immortality as expressed by the great writers whose thoughts have been preserved in prose and verse, and drew the lesson that to some extent the conflicting opinions were the result of a difference in mental attitude; and that this difference, more apparent than real frequently depended upon the reader's interpretation of the language employed.

Mason, "we have so associated charity with the relief of distress—the giving of alms, that this has become its primary meaning. This consideration led the revisers of the New Testament to change the time-hallowed verse: 'And now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity,' these three; but the greatest of these is Charity,' and to substitute for it, 'And now abideth Faith, Hope and Love, these three; but the greatest of these is Charity,' and to substitute for it, 'And now abideth Faith, Hope and Love, these three; but the greatest of these is Love.' I venture the prediction that this new version will not endure. Properly understood the word love is entirely appropriate. But it likewise, by force of custom, carries a special Love, these three; but the greatest of these is Love.' I venture the prediction that this new version will not endure. Properly understood the word love is entirely appropriate. But it likewise, by force of custom, carries a special meaning. It has a wide diversity of uses, but it suggests sentiment, if not sentimentality. It is not well suited to the practical commonplaces of everyday life.

lesson that to some extent the conflicting opinions were the result of a difference in mental attitude; and that this difference, more apparent than real frequently depended upon the reader's interpretation of the language employed.

The same words may have a different maning to different authors, and may give to one reader a different impression from that given to another. The effusive man expresses his good will by profuse cordiality. The reticent man may mean as much by his grudging monosyllables. One clergyman defines this task as saving human souls; another as upbuilding human character; and perhaps they mean essentially the same thing.

While the Elk order is not a religious body, Judge Mason emphasized the point that its creed contains many of the principles of brotherhood and fraternity upon which every religious section founded. The Elk is not censorious. He concedes to every man the right of opinion. He is tolerant. Perhaps a better word than "toleration" to express this Elk idea is "Charity," used in its broader sense as descriptive of a frame of mind.

"But by constant use," said Judge Mason, "we have so associated charity with the relief of distress—the giving of the principles of opinion, the right of opinion are of the course record to 72, which was the concedes to every man the right of opinion. He is tolerant. Perhaps a better word than "toleration" to express this Elk idea is "Charity," used in its broader sense as descriptive of a frame of mind.

"But by constant use," said Judge Mason, "we have so associated charity with the relief of distress—the giving of the record of the course record to 72, which was found in 35, thereby lower ing the course record to 72, which was found in 35, thereby lower ing the course record to 72, which was found in 35, thereby lower ing the course record to 72, which was found in 35, the relief of the coming with the relief of distress—the giving of the r author of "Redlight" Law Is in St. Coursentimentality. It is not well suited to the practical commonplaces of every-day life.

"We don't need to love a man, in the sense in which the word is ordinarily used, in order to acknowledge that he has the same right to his opinions that we have to ours. Whatever you may call that spirit, it is to be found here-in the ritual of the order. It is not a religion, but it has a just a place in every code which attempts to define the duties of men toward one another.

"The philosophy of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is essentially practical. It seeks to deal with the things of this world. It declines to view our life here as of little consequence or as a vale of tears. It realizes that there need be no more beatific heaven than this world might be if all conformed to the teachings of the founder of Christianity; that no perdition could be more desolute than this world if human nature were always at lits worst.

"The spirit of the Elks order is optimistic. It looks on the bright side. It seeks the lessons of life not in the remote days of some far-off, land. It reads the wisdom and goodness and mercy of an infracles wroth Father, not mercy of an infracles wroth Father, not mercy for in infracles wroth Father, not mercy of an infracles wroth Father, not ment of the first in the best preparation for a world to come is a constant striving to make this world brighter, better and happier."

St. Louis. Dec. 5.—Phoebe Courins, who was the first women lawyer in the United States, the first women to hold the office of United States marchal, and the first women to be graduated from Washington university, was buried here this afternoon. With her was lowered into the grave the marshal's bedge of silver presented by President Cleveland to her father and upon her father's death to her.

Miss Cousins died in poverty in a bare room Baturday. Her burial was bare room Baturday. Her burial was brovided for by Mrs. William Thompson, wife of a banker, who in their childhood days lived next door to the Cousins and was Phoebe's playmate. Two automobiles formed the funeral cortege. The first was occupied by he Thompsons, the second by John Cousins, 65 years old, brother of Miss Phoebe Cousins, and a few friends of he family.

New York, Dec. 8.—James K. McGuire, x-mayor of Syracuse, came to the city oday to surrender to the district attor-sey's office on an indictment charging hat he solicited a $5.000 bribe from a cortoration in the interest of the Democrat tate committee. His indictment was an surgrowth of the John Doe investigation nestituted to sift allegations that conractors had been "sandbarged" into naking campaign contributions. Returning from the south Sunday, after a trip in the tropics, McGuire last night issued a long statement, saying that the charge gainst him was "a frameup hatched by he interests whose materials were rected by the state."

His brother, George R. McGuire, who cave testimony tending to support the contention that there had been dickering with contractors as charged, the expensive characterised as mentally and obysically weak.

McGuire pleaded not guilty. Ball at 500 was quickly furnished.

New York Stock Market.

Wall St., New York, Dec. & STOCKS—Sentiment in Wall Street was more cheerful today; the change in feeling was attributed chiefly to improved conditions in the money market on estimates of the probable attitude of the Washington administration towards corporations.

New Haven was weak through the morning on its showing of a shrinkage in October net of $253,000. It fell 2% to within a fraction of its recent low record. Sugar dropped 6 points to 103, the lowest since 1908. Tobacco shares were bid up vigorously.

Bonds were irregular.

Active bidding for stocks raised prices sharply at the opening today. The principal issues were purchased in blocks of several thousand shares. Canadian Pacific swung up 74. Union Pacific 1½ and Reading. Steel, Amalgamated and Can.

New Haven was the weak point in the list, dropping 1½.
